St. Dunstaners in the Election News

THE return of Captain Sir Ian Fraser, our Chairman, to the House of Commons for the third time by a majority of 3,601, is a notable event in the story of St. Dunstan's.

There happened to be a St. Dunstan's Walk at Headquarters on the Saturday following the poll, when Lady Fraser gave away the prizes, and Sir Ian proposed a vote of thanks to the judges, starters and escorts. All present congratulated Sir Ian. In replying he said: "St. Dunstan's has no politics, but I am glad that my friends should welcome my return to the House of Commons. I hope the opportunity of public service thus afforded will enable me to continue to look after the interests of my many ex-service friends."

This will, we feel sure, be the spirit in which Sir Ian's victory will be welcomed by St. Dunstaners all the world over. But there is another reason why the Chairman's election will give satisfaction to our readers, for it affords dramatic evidence of the extent to which blinded soldiers may play their part in the normal life of the community.

Sir Ian has received messages of congratulation from St. Dunstaners all over the country and in the Dominions. One St. Dunstaner telegraphs—"Hearty congratulations upon your victory, cheers." Another—"Good shooting, hearty congratulations." These are typical. From New Zealand comes a cable—"Hearty congratulations from Empire's most distant blinded soldiers."

We feel that on personal as well as St. Dunstan's grounds, without regard to Party views, these messages will be echoed by St. Dunstaners as a whole and, for that matter, by a much wider circle of blind people and ex-servicemen.

We would also like to offer Mr. Frederick Martin our congratulations upon the splendid though unhappily unsuccessful fight he put up in Central Aberdeen. Mr. Fred Martin is a blinded officer and one of the earliest St. Dunstaners. He sat in the House of Commons in 1922-1924. He is one of the most prominent public men in the local government life of Aberdeen City and County. We hope it will not be long before he returns to the House of Commons.

A Message from Matron

MY DEAR BOYS,

A Merry Christmas and a very Happy New Year to you all, your wives and children too.

Distance makes it impossible to give each one of you a hearty shake of the hand, so I must ask ST. DUNSTAN'S REVIEW to do this for me and also to bring to you my warmest and heartiest good wishes. May the coming New Year have in store for each one of you, the best of good luck, much happiness, good health and prosperity.

God bless you all.

Your affectionate old Friend,
MATRON.

Brighton.

December, 1935.

St. Dunstan's and the Late Lord Jellicoe

ST. DUNSTANERS all over the Empire will have heard with the deepest regret of the death of Lord Jellicoe. When the sad news was received, the following telegram was sent to Lady Jellicoe from our Chairman:—

On behalf of British blinded soldiers I express deep admiration of Lord Jellicoe's devoted work for ex-service men and heartfelt sympathy with his family.

IAN FRASER,
Chairman, St. Dunstan's.

Sir Ian has received the following acknowledgment:—

DEAR SIR,—Lady Jellicoe wishes me to express to you and the British Blinded Soldiers her heartfelt thanks for your kind message of sympathy.—
Yours faithfully,

LIONEL M. J. BALFOUR.

In deference to Lady Jellicoe's wishes, most of the wreaths at the funeral on November 25th were of poppies. St. Dunstan's tribute took the form of our badge and was inscribed, "In deepest sympathy from Captain Sir Ian Fraser and the war-blinded men of St. Dunstan's."

Armistice Dance

THE Armistice Dance on November 12th was held for the first time at the Portman Rooms, Baker Street, and everybody agreed that the new arrangement was a huge success. Nearly three hundred St. Dunstaners were there with their escorts, and yet there was plenty of room for dancing. St. Dunstan's own Orchestra provided the music, and they did great work.

With the General Election only two days ahead, Sir Ian and Lady Fraser had many other appointments to fit in but they found time to look in at the beginning of the evening, and although they had to leave soon after, they came back later and Sir Ian addressed the guests who were present. In his speech, Sir Ian paid a special tribute to Miss Thellusson and her staff from Brighton who were there that evening, and then, to everybody's surprise and pleasure, introduced Mrs. Chadwick Bates, who had arrived in London early that morning from South Africa. Mrs. Bates received a tremendous welcome and the applause was deafening when she rose to answer everybody's demand for a speech. She expressed her great pleasure at seeing so many old friends once more, and went on to describe her meetings in South Africa with St. Dunstaners who, she said, were regarded by the civilian blind as a pattern to the blind world.

After that, chats with Mrs. Bates, Miss Thellusson, Sister Sutcliffe, and many other old friends, were the order of the day, and the time flew by until it was twelve o'clock and yet another Armistice Dance came to an end.

Royal Wedding Cake for St. Dunstan's

A GENEROUS piece of wedding cake has been received by St. Dunstan's from the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, and this has been sent down to Brighton for Matron to distribute among St. Dunstaners there.

An Old Friend Returns

WE all unite in giving a hearty welcome to Miss F. Morris who has rejoined the staff of St. Dunstan's and has taken charge of the Netting and Wool-Rug Department at the Raglan Street Stores.

Miss Morris, as many men will remember, was sports sister at Brighton and before that at the Bungalow, Townsend House, and St. John's Lodge, having come to St. Dunstan's in 1919. For some six years she also taught the making of nets and wool rugs at the Brighton Home.

Memorial Service to Sir Arthur Pearson

THE fourteenth annual service in memory of our founder, the late Sir Arthur Pearson, Bart., was held on the afternoon of Monday, December 9th, at St. George's Church, Kemp Town, Brighton. The Vicar, the Rev. H. A. Eytton-Jones, conducted the service, and read the lesson in the absence of Sir Neville Pearson, who was unable to be present for the first time at this memorial service.

Our President, Lady Arthur Pearson, D.B.E., was present, as was the Chairman, Captain Sir Ian Fraser, and Mr. Askew. Lady Fraser was prevented from attending by illness and so was Miss Hamar Greenwood. Miss Thellusson, Commandant Matron at Brighton, together with one hundred of our men from the Home, and from the adjacent district, were in the congregation.

Our Chaplain at Headquarters, the Rev. J. E. Williams, delivered the address. He took his text from Jeremiah, chapter 20, verse 30, "I do earnestly remember him." He said that it was in a spirit of love and gratitude that they had met there that afternoon to remember one who did such great things for them. Sir Arthur's reputation seemed to enlarge as the years went on.

Like other great workers of the type of Florence Nightingale, who also ministered to the wounded, and of David Livingstone, who spread Christianity among the heathens, Sir Arthur proved that many of our greatest men were not those who went out to conquer in war but who sought to give service and peace to suffering humanity.

"Sir Arthur had marvellous gifts and gave them to us. He will be remembered not as the founder and editor of great papers but as the founder of St. Dunstan's.

"He loved the men of St. Dunstan's and they loved him. He not only gave love but he inspired it. It was he who first created the spirit of St. Dunstan's. The problems of St. Dunstaners were always close to his heart and in addition to love, he gave service. He had great personal courage and inspired it among all with whom he came in touch.

"It is our duty and our pride still to carry on the high tradition of service which formed so remarkable a feature of the character of Sir Arthur Pearson. We shall remember the service and we shall remember the man until the going down of the sun."

DURING the morning of December 9th, a small party left Headquarters for Hampstead Cemetery, where Mr. Askew read prayers at a short service.

St. Dunstaners were represented by J. Brown and H. Crabtree, and Instructor Tovell was also present. A wreath of poppies, made in the form of our badge, was placed on Sir Arthur's grave, and among other floral tributes there was a beautiful wreath "from St. Dunstan's telephonists."

Telephonists' Reunion

ABOUT a hundred of our telephonists and business men attended the annual reunion dinner at Headquarters on Friday, November 29th. Captain Sir Ian Fraser presided, and after the Loyal Toast addressed the men. He congratulated them on their work and pointed out that whereas two years ago when he last presided there were fifteen of them out of employment, now there was only one—and that was the case of a telephonist who did not wish to leave his own district. He went on to discuss the General Election and was warmly cheered when he described his own success in North St. Pancras. He described it on the whole as a "gentlemanly" election and contrasted it with some others in which he had taken part. He also referred to the fact that by sitting in the House he was able to do his "bit" in helping ex-Servicemen and also the blind population as a whole.

Mr. Askew was present at the reunion and Lady Fraser and Mrs. Chadwick Bates joined the guests in the lounge after dinner.

An excellent concert was provided by Cecil Frederick, humorist, and Pauline and Diana Owens, in a musical interlude.

News of St. Dunstaners

AS usual St. Dunstaners took a prominent part in the Armistice Day observances. J. Sheehy, of Dover, was asked by Major and Lady Violet Astor to place their wreath on the Dover War Memorial on the morning of November 11th, and for the remainder of the day was busy at the Field of Remembrance.

In Belfast, St. Dunstan's was represented by A. Gribben and W. J. Berry, who took part in the City's tribute to the memory of those who died in the Great War. Mr. N. Macauley acted as escort to the party.

E. A. Alexander, of Bournemouth, sang at the Armistice Night Rally at the Pavilion, Bournemouth.

W. A. Mugeridge, of Great Bookham, who laid the wreath on the memorial on behalf of the British Legion, must be one of our most active members of the Legion. He is Benevolent Secretary, Publicity Agent, and Delegate for Conferences for the Bookham and Effingham Branch, and, in addition, edits the Bookham Bulletin.

A. Garbutt, of Stockton, was the speaker at a Remembrance Service in the Victoria Hall, Sunderland, on November 17th. The Sunderland Echo wrote: "A passionate advocate and worker for world peace, Mr. Garbutt has few comperes in the North as an eloquent and convincing speaker. Despite his handicap he holds an important business position in Stockton, and his keen grasp and up-to-date knowledge of current national and international affairs is remarkable."

A. J. Head, of Brixton Coombe, Devon, has been winning many prizes with his bantams. He took a third at the annual show of the Plympton and District Poultry and Pigeon Fanciers' Association, a third at the Ivybridge Show, a second at Plymouth, and many "highly commended" and "reserves" have come his way.

Congratulations to W. Macpherson, of Brighton, S. P. Peacey, of Palmer's Green, and Rees Warren, formerly of Wales, who have been successful in obtaining posts as telephonists in London.

"The Light of the Mind"

THIS is the title of a book written by a St. Dunstan's officer, W. J. Voss, which has just been published in this country by Chapman and Hall.

Simply, but vividly, Captain Voss describes in the opening chapters his war experiences, his life at St. Dunstan's, and his fresh start under the new and difficult conditions. Since his return to Australia after training at St. Dunstan's, the author has had many varied experiences. He has travelled extensively and the remaining chapters of his book are a happy record of his wanderings in many lands.

In a Foreword to "The Light of the Mind," Sir Philip Gibbs says that the book is a call to courage, and he gives a personal account of his meetings with Sir Arthur Pearson. "Like the author of this book," Sir Philip writes, "I was filled with admiration for the valour of that man who refused to surrender his soul to this calamity and went on with the job of life, determined that it should make but little difference to his work, interests and enjoyment, except that he had now dedicated himself to the service of men handicapped in the same way. He himself was a proof that a blinded man could take his place with his more fortunate fellows without a sense of inferiority or helplessness. This book and its author teach the same lesson. I regard this work as a memorial and as a tribute to all those blinded officers and men who lost their sight in the last war; and I hope it will be read not only for its own interest, which is very great, but with remembrance of those whose war began in their own souls after their wounding, when they realized for the first time that they were blind and had to fight all the demons of despair."

"In Memory"

GUNNER WILLIAM CUBITT
(Royal Field Artillery)

IT is with deep regret that we announce the death of W. Cubitt, of Norwich. This St. Dunstaner came to us in the early days of the War—1916. For some years he endeavoured to carry on with basket-making and later on with mat-making, but on account of his ill-health could not manage more than netting for some time before he died.

He suffered considerably for many months and passed away on 28th November, at his own home. He was buried at Norwich Cemetery.

A wreath was sent from Sir Ian and his comrades at St. Dunstan's.

He leaves a widow and a young family, to whom we extend our deepest sympathy.

JOHN HUNTLEY McMILLAN
(2nd Transvaal Scottish)

IT is with deep regret that we hear from Mrs. Bates—who is at present in England—of the death of J. H. McMillan, of Johannesburg, who served in South West Africa and lost his sight as a result. On account of his age and ill-health, when McMillan came under St. Dunstan's care, he did not actually take up any training.

He died in South Africa on the 28th October, and we tender sincere sympathy to his widow.

PRIVATE WILLIAM GILBERT PARKER
(2nd Northamptonshire Regiment)

WE deeply regret to announce the death of W. G. Parker, of Nottingham.

Enlisting on September 1st, 1914, at the age of 19, he was wounded at Arras two years later, and came to St. Dunstan's in the early months of 1917. In spite of severely damaged hands he was trained as a telephonist and for many years was employed in his home town of Nottingham by the municipal authorities.

In 1926, however, his health became so bad that it was impossible for him to carry on and he has never been fit since that period. About a month before his death his condition became rapidly worse and he passed peacefully away at his own home on 6th December, being buried at Wilford Hill Cemetery, Nottingham, after a funeral service at St. Faith's Church.

A wreath in the form of a St. Dunstan's badge was sent from Sir Ian and his comrades. We tender to his widow and child our sincere sympathy in their great loss.

The Man with a Dustcart

(From a Correspondent.)

THERE are several well-known makes of car that modestly claim to be "Monarchs of the Road," but they are all left at the post in the race for that regal title by a familiar roadster that I have just passed. "Passed" is the mot juste, as the French so itally put it, for I did pass it although we were going in the same direction, and although, too, it was going at its normal cruising speed.

For my "Monarch of the Road" was a dustcart, complete with horse, ambling along the gutter at a steady one horse-power per hour—if you must be technical. It seems to me that an equipage of this kind is indubitably the king of the highway. It goes on its way as relentlessly as fate. It stops for no one and, indeed, the difference between its motion and its stoppage is so infinitesimal as to be almost impossible to notice.

It has no horn, for it never needs one. It is only concerned with the horns of others—and not very often with them! It skids not; neither does it go into a side-spin. It never has to imperil itself by pulling up suddenly to avoid damage to passers-by. It has no number to be taken. Its wheels cannot be punctured. It has no glass to shatter—the illusions of its occupant.

And yet it gets there all the same!

The driver of a dustcart is Monarch of All He Surveys. He is also Monarch of All He Delays. As Cicero once said to a reporter from The Tiber Times, "How pleasant it is to watch the misfortunes of others!" What could be more unfortunate for others than to have to crawl behind a dustcart in a car capable of 90, what time Ben Hur in front throttles down his horse into even a slower pace yet and puts up a new record for the slowness of rate at which a vehicle can move while yet being actually in motion.

Magnificent saloon cars may be powerful things in themselves, but they have not the power over other traffic wielded by a dustcart. Motor cars are active; dustcarts are passive. That is the root of the whole matter! Consider a dustcart for one moment, or even two. You just put the horse into neutral and off you go. That's all. You do not have to do anything. You never, for example, have to exert yourself to overtake traffic. That overtakes you. You just plod along and leave all the bustle and strife to others.

As a result, there is no need to make complicated signals to tell overtaking traffic of your intentions. They know what your intentions are alright! They are to get to your destination in the longest possible time. Moreover there is no fear of a collision. Every day you hear of cars colliding. Whoever heard of two dustcarts colliding? The idea is monstrous. Occasionally they may get a slap in a back from an overwrought 1935 Wheelbarrow with an outboard motor. That is all.

Driving a dustcart is not only a ride: it is a rest cure as well. Each of these homely vehicles is nothing but a peripatetic hydro. The dustcart is the barge of the road. Indeed, it is even better than a barge, for there are no locks to go through. Only a little circular traffic occasionally, and, when a dustcart goes all circular, the other traffic is more like a Slang Dictionary in two volumes than a mere circular.

What a fine life, too, for a misanthrope to be a dustcart driver! Quite legally, he can disorganize the traffic of a whole city, and, with a sweet smile on his face, he can hold up the passage of half the peerage, while he negotiates a road that is under repair.

In the country he can do even better. I have seen a dustcart hold up a motor coach for a quarter of an hour, and it is the only thing in the whole wide world that could achieve such a miracle.

The driver of a dustcart is a human full stop—the living example of a super-Einstein philosophy—the man who moves while clearly stationary.

The one that I saw was, at any rate!
There was a tremendous car behind him.
"Hoot! Hoot!" it went,
Did he care?
Not two hoots!

News of Young St. Dunstaners

Harry McAndrew, who is the 14 years-old son of J. McAndrew, of Bournemouth, has passed his London Matriculation.

Bernard McNicholls, son of J. McNicholls, of Manchester, has won a scholarship to a Higher Grade school.

R. J. Vine's son, Leslie, has passed his Civil Service examination.

A Moon Reader

F. W. MATTHEWS, of Soberton, is to be congratulated on the way he has tackled moon reading. Many years ago he had to give up braille on account of ill-health, but a month or so back he set himself to learn Moon. Already he has made great headway. He says he enjoys it immensely and gets through quite a lot of books.

A Line from Overseas

W. R. FARNELL, of Toronto, is very glad to hear that "Nuggets" is coming back into circulation. He writes: "I was sorry to see its publication suspended, as I thought it was a miniature Tit-Bits, Pearson's Weekly and Answers combined into one."

The National Laying Test Annual Dinner

THE National Utility Poultry Society held its Annual Dinner at the Grand Central Hotel, London, on October 24th. After a splendid repast and several toasts, the awards for the trials just completed were presented by Lady Denman, the President of the Society.

Once again through the courtesy of Mr. J. N. Leigh, Test Manager, two tables were reserved for the St. Dunstan's Party, and a very happy one it proved to be. As last year our men were warmly cheered as they went to receive their awards and many expressions of admiration and sympathy were heard. Owing to the recent serious illness of Mr. Thomson Brown, he and Mrs. Thomson Brown were unable to be present, and we all missed his genial companionship. The writer of these notes was asked to convey to him the sympathy and best wishes from all gathered for a speedy and permanent recovery.

Those of us who attended last year's function also remembered with sadness that on that occasion we had with us Mr. H. W. Yates, who has recently passed on. Mr. Yates, who was a competitor in the St. Dunstan's Section of the National Test, also took leading awards in the Sussex County Trials.

Present this year were the prize winners and their wives, Miss M. A. Legate and Messrs. Minton, Edwards, Balkwill and the writer. Mr. Minton is a close friend of Mr. Thomson Brown and indeed, of the farm at King's Langley. His quips and sallies and fund of good stories were a feature of the evening. We hope he will come along another year. Incidentally, he has promised another prize of £5 for the current trials.

The prize winners were:—

1st. A. Chaffin, Daily Mail Cash Prize £7, and from Capt. R. A. Todd £5, for the best pen of R.I.R's. The St. Dunstan's Challenge Cup and miniature, and Gold Medal.

2nd. E. H. Carpenter, Daily Mail Cash Prize £5, and silver medal.

3rd. D. McLaren, Daily Mail Cash Prize £3, and bronze medal. Also cup presented by Mr. Powell-Owen for the best pen of Light Breeds.

C. Peach also won a prize of £5, presented by Mr. Walter Bradley for the best pen of White Wyandottes.

A. Pink was awarded a medal for the pen holding the best winter record.

It is interesting to note that our section finished with the best average of all the sections represented at the National Test. This reflects great credit to our men and all concerned. The Test is a source of great interest to the competitors and many are the half-crowns won and lost. It is sincerely hoped that more men will support this Test in the future in order that the houses at our disposal may be filled, thus shewing our appreciation of the generosity of the Daily Mail in allowing us a section in the leading laying trial of the world.

C. S. WALDEN.

Poetic Justice

J. J. is not to get away with his limerick in the Jubilee "Review" after all. R. J. Vine, of Ewhurst, sends the following verses "as a comment":

A certain young fellow from Wokingham,
Met his pals at the Hall, and was joking 'em;
When they said "You look posh,"
He just murmured "By gosh;
You should see me at work in the cloaking room."
This happy young fellow from Wokingham
Again met his pals and was poking 'em;
"How're your bees?" they all said,
"Very beesy and fed
Right up to the teeth: for I'm smoking 'em."
On the river this young man from Wokingham
Raced his pals for the pleasure of spoking 'em;
But the girls he would take
For a row on the lake,
And often was found to be stroking 'em.

Walking

The 9 mile Walking Race will take place from Headquarters on Saturday, January 18th, at 2.30 p.m. Closing date for entries, January 4th.

The 12 mile event has been fixed for Saturday, February 22nd, at 2.30 p.m. Closing date for entries, February 8th.

Five Mile Walk

IN spite of very bad weather, only two of the original entries failed to turn out on November 16th. Col. Eric Ball, after a few preliminary words of encouragement in the Lounge, got the field off to a good start. The pace set by the leaders was very hot, Jerry Jerome, very much improved, being close up to Archie Brown all through. In B Section, Harry Boorman had a great race for premier place with T. ap Rhys, a newcomer to race walking.

Miss Hamar Greenwood, who was to have presented the prizes, sent a telegram expressing regret at her inability to come along owing to indisposition. After tea, served by Miss Davies and her helpers, Sir Ian and Lady Fraser came over, and although the week had been a very heavy one with Armistice, Poppy Day, and the General Election, Lady Fraser presented the prizes and Sir Ian expressed his thanks to those who had made the Walk such a success. Congratulations from everyone present were extended to Sir Ian on his victory at the Election.

Brighton

AT the club meeting on November 20th, Matron kindly presented the prizes for the summer sports and very generously promised a Cup or Prize to the value of £2 2s. 0d. for the player with the highest aggregate in the Winter Domino Competition. The club members presented to Sister Peacock a travelling watch for her kindness in preparing tea.

The first round of the Domino Competition followed, H. E. Robertson leading with six games. Allcott won the Racing Plate worn by Woodstock in the 1935 Cesarewitch which Miss Boyd Rochfort had kindly presented.

The club members subscribed for a box of chocolates as a Domino Drive prize for wives and lady escorts. Miss Peacock won this, but put it up for competition again, and amid great excitement, Mrs. Allcott was successful with a total of four games.
